"The Masked Ball" Last Night. "The Masked Ball," a Verdi composi

tion so seldom heard here as to almost give it the interest of a premier, was presented by the San Carlo Grand Opera Company at the Belasco last night before an audience, which for spontaneous recognition of score values refuted the occasional criticism that Washington is not a musical city. That the Italian master should have selected colonial Boston for the setting of his foreign-flavored tragedy would add its thrill of surprise to the enjoyment of the work, except that most music lovers are familiar with the fact that Neapolitan resentment of the plot compelled Verdi to change his locale; hence the American environment and anglicization of "Un Ballo in Maschero" into its present title.

The opera, as revived by the San Carlo company, is one of the distinguished successes of its repertoire, and its rendition last night served signally to accent musically and dramatically night before an audience, which for
